45 MIN

Ingredients

"CRAB"

- 1/3 block firm tofu
- Old Bay seasoning
- Soy sauce
- Gyoza sauce
- Plant-based mayo (highly recommend Hellmann's)
- Sriracha
- Sesame seeds
- Sesame oil (recommend Kikkoman)
- A little crumbled nori

ROLL

- Sushi rice (recommend microwaveable)
- Nori sheets
- Cucumber
- Avocado
- Rice wine vinegar (optional)

BATTER & FRY

- Flour
- Cornstarch
- Water
- Panko
- Vegetable oil, for frying

TO TOP

- Spicy mayo (plant-based mayo + a touch of sriracha)
- Unagi sauce

Method

1. Microwave the sushi rice. Open it and let it cool.
2. Make the "crab." Shred or thinly chop 1/3 block of tofu into tiny strips. I aim for about 1 inch long and very narrow. Crumble some nori, and season with Old Bay, soy sauce, gyoza sauce, mayo, a little bit of sriracha, sesame seeds, and sesame oil. Mixy mixy, but try to maintain the tofu's shape. You want enough for a light sauce, but not a soup.
3. Thinly chop the cucumber into little chopsticks.
4. Cut an avocado in half, and use a knife to divide it into thin slices. Remove the slices and set aside.
5. Mix more spicy mayo: add mayo and then a touch of sriracha, and combine. Set aside.
6. Lay out plastic wrap, slightly larger than your nori sheet.
7. Wet your hands with water (and rice wine vinegar, if you happen to have it). Spread the sushi rice on your nori sheet in a thin layer. Carefully flip the sheet rice-side down onto your plastic wrap.
8. In the middle of your roll, add your crab, cucumber, and avocado in a thin line across the sheet.
9. Then, roll your sushi up using the plastic wrap. Give it a little press.
10. Now, in a flat dish, mix together water, flour, and cornstarch until you form a soup.
11. In another dish, put out some panko.
12. Get a pan that is large enough to fit your entire sushi roll. Fill it with about an inch of vegetable oil, and turn on the heat.

13. Carefully roll your sushi roll in the flour soup, and then in the panko.
14. Add your breaded sushi roll to the bubbling oil to deep fry it. Carefully roll it until each side is golden brown.
15. Remove from the pan, and slice with a sushi knife.
16. Top with your spicy mayo and unagi sauce.
